Turn off the road and the noise just falls away. What greets you is 3.62 acres that have been quietly telling the same story since 1895, back when this land was a working turkey farm. More than a century later it has become something rare. A modern farmhouse that honors where it came from while handing you the life you have been picturing. Start with the mornings. Coffee on the covered porch that was added for exactly this, a kind of stillness you forgot was possible, your own acreage unfolding in front of you. Between the main farmhouse and its separate cottage, the property offers five bedrooms and three baths. It feels the way a farmhouse should feel. Solid, lived in, loved. Then you see the barn, and you understand what makes this place different. Nearly the size of a home, with heated floors, it is the blank canvas most people only fantasize about. A studio. A workshop. A place to finally build the thing you always said you would build if you only had the room. Past it, trails and hiking wait for the days you want to disappear into the trees for an hour. And when you want the house full, the yard delivers. The pool, the open lawn, the kind of backyard that turns an ordinary Saturday into something people remember. This is an entertainer's dream, with all the room to host the way you have always pictured. Quietly working in your favor is that separate cottage, already leased and producing income while you make the rest of the property yours. The land does a little of the heavy lifting so you do not have to. Homes like this do not come along often. The acreage, the history, the barn, the pool, the income, the quiet... all of it on one rare piece of Suffern. Come see it before someone else falls first. Coming soon. Showings by appointment, with Brandy present for every one.
